Trading Places
Setting up an export and trade regulation compliance program.

Problem
Many companies want to do business abroad, and international markets are expanding rapidly. However, any company that is involved in export or import may be in for a shock in the form of the regulations and bureaucratic rules that are necessarily involved. Imported products have customs requirements, and exports can run afoul of U.S. anti-boycott laws, the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, controls on encryption and other sensitive technology, and the like.

Action
Bring in counsel for a comprehensive review of the steps that are needed for companies that want to participate in international trade and of the tribunals (Court of International Trade, U.S. Trade Representative) that may have a say in the matter.

Results
You will find that doors begin to open and that you will start to develop a successful international business.

Contact
For more information contact James Kearney at (703)394-2214 or jkearney@wcsr.com.