Update – New Presunrise and Postsunset Authorizations

March 7, 2007

To: Broadcast Clients
From: Peter Gutmann

FCC staff has just advised that they are rescinding all of the recalculated presunrise and postsunset authorizations which we had noted in our memorandum of March 2.

Beginning March 11 when Daylight Savings Time begins this year, licensees with presunrise or postsunset authority are to use the parameters listed for April on their prior authorizations (but with advanced time). Until further notice from the Commission, the values contained in existing authorizations for subsequent months are to remain in effect.

At first, staff had thought that errors in the computer program could be corrected so that new authorizations could be issued this week, but now they advise that the program is full of “bugs” and must be thoroughly reworked, possibly not until this Fall.

Again, please ignore the recent recalculations of presunrise and postsunset authorizations. If you need a copy of your prior parameters or have any questions concerning this confusing situation, please let us know.
